Citation information: Author(s), year, title, journal, volume, (publisher) pages

The method of research the writer has used is: ________________________________
Identify and label on the article; indicate page number above.

The main point (thesis) of the article is (find it in the introduction, at the end of the literature review, or conclusion): NOT IN THE ABSTRACT
Rewrite in your own words; identify and label on the article; indicate page number below.
This is only one sentence.

The sub-points (topic sentences provide this information) that support the thesis are:
Find only in the Results, Discussion, and/or Conclusion sections.
Rewrite in your own words; identify and label on the article; indicate page numbers below.
These are only one sentence each.

1. ________________________________

2. ________________________________

3. ________________________________

4. ________________________________

5. ________________________________

One original quote from this article that is very good or very important:
Identify and label on the article; indicate page number below; copy the words exactly.
______________________________

______________________________

______________________________
Analysis and Synthesis of Reading Material

I agree with this article in this way (state the point and why you agree with it):

I disagree with this article in this way (state the point and why you disagree with it):

This article is like/agrees with other articles in this way (compare the content of this reading with other material you have read – be sure to name the other article, book, etc.):

This article is not like the other articles in this way (compare the content of this reading with other material you have read – be sure to name the other article, book, etc.):

My comments about this article (explain your opinion of this article and consider how the information in this article is related to current developments in your field, past developments in your field, or what you've read in the newspaper or seen on television):